The Bashful Lover.

Ah, well! John came to-night and stood
For full an hour beside the bars.
And we two watched, between the trees
The glimmer of the moon and stars.
John acted very strange, I think—
I wish I knew the reason why;
I really though he ment to say
Something to-night besides good-by.

John's coming here quite eften now;
I'm sure I don't know why he shouldAlthough my sister Jenny says
It's talked around the neighborhood
That he is making love to see—
The strangest thing I ever heard;
For if it's true, how queer it is
That John has nover said a word.

Ah, well! I shouldn't care so much
If John himself had told me so;
For then he might have said it all
Upon his own account, you know.
But he's so bashful, I believe
He'd never dare to speak out plain;
I hope he'll muster courage up,
And fry it, when he comes again.

It cannot be that I'm to blame—
I'm sure I've helped him all I could;
I've always met him at the bars
And talked as any woman would.
That had a lover whom she liked
And waited, with her heat aglow,
For him to break the subject first.
And them how quick she'd let him kno

But John he keeps a coming still,
Just as he has for twelve months past;
Pve thought sometimes it looked as ther
I'd have to speak myself at last.
I'm bound that he shall know the truth,
And now, resolved, I cannot wait
For him to find it out himself,
And so, next time, I'll try my fate.
